County Executive Fitzwater's Plan Invests in Schools, Essential Services Without Raising Taxes

FREDERICK, Md. – Frederick County Executive Jessica Fitzwater today unveiled her proposed FY26 budget for Frederick County, emphasizing a record investment in public education and delivery of essential services without raising taxes.

“One of my most important tasks is to prepare a balanced budget that delivers results, provides essential services, keeps the core functions of government on track, and reflects our community’s priorities,” County Executive Fitzwater said. “In a year with great uncertainty, this budget puts students first with record investments in public education and protects core services that our residents rely on. It achieves all of these goals without raising taxes.”
